EDWARDSVILLE - Southern Illinois University Edwardsville is now enrolling for Summer Session, the summer term that offers an array of diverse and foundational courses. Summer Session encompasses everything from core requirements to continuing education. Whether students are looking to learn in-person on the beautiful, park-like campuses, completely online or even in a blended setting, SIUE's Summer Session offers students an accessible environment to blend summer fun with academic enrichment.

For undergraduate and graduate students, this is an excellent and accommodating way to meet degree requirements.

"SIUE's Summer Session courses provide students an opportunity to continue to make progress toward their degree over the summer," said Denise Cobb, PhD, Provost and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs. "Many of the courses are online or flexibly scheduled, so that our current and visiting students can make the most of the summer."

All Summer Session courses are taught by full-time SIUE faculty members, giving students the ability to experience the same quality of education as the spring and fall semesters.

“Whether meeting a requirement or exploring a new topic, summer courses are taught by our same outstanding faculty with the excellent quality that our students expect,” said Cobb.

Registration is currently open and classes begin as early as Monday, May 6. Browse available courses on the SIUE Summer Session webpage.

SIUE’s Summer Session allows students the flexibility and option to explore new courses and customize their learning experience. Register today and discover how you can own tomorrow.
